

About the Five-Year Strategic Plan for Workforce Development

The 2010-2015 strategic plan for workforce development, Creating the Strategy for Today's Needs and Tomorrow's Talent, is Florida's workforce system's bold, forward-thinking vision for strengthening the state's workforce.

Created with input from Florida leaders in business, education and economic development and support from the Agency for Workforce Innovation and Florida's 24 Regional Workforce Boards, the plan confronts the challenges of getting Floridians back to work while also focusing on the most promising opportunities to diversify our state's economy for national and global competitiveness. The plan centers on six strategic goals and 39 achievements needed to accomplish the goals.

This important road map was created through model collaboration and openness. Our collaborative partners and the public were invited to contribute to the work at every stage. Throughout the process, information from eight Workforce Florida Strategy Council sessions, roundtables with experts and interviews as well as other research and data were available on our website, where it remains as part of the strategic planning toolkit.

Since the plan was delivered to the Governor and Legislature, Workforce Florida has continued its collaboration to create an operational plan consisting of 14 projects to advance strategic work. Florida's strategic plan for workforce development, and efforts to implement it, have been recognized by the U.S. Department of Labor as a national best practice.
